COUNTRY FLAVOR

MENDING FENCE

There comes a day in April when a man knows he should mend fences. Research does not reveal when the term first took on political implications, but it seems logical to assume that a man who was raised on a farm first applied the meaning to his political standing with those who elected him to office. Sometimes the countryman feels that fence mending for political-minded citizens could be more aptly described as fence straddling. A one-horse farmer on a hillside farm, however, enjoys his fence mending as a regular spring task.

Grandfather declared that April always offered a few days when the land was too soft to haul out dressing and when the road was too muddy to try to go to town. That was the time, he claimed, that Nature intended a man to run his boundaries and to fix up winter damage. Since ancient days, when nomadic man first learned to plant seeds and harvest crops and to confine his herds, boundaries have been a part of what one hesitatingly calls civilization.

Men have built fences of dried clay, bricks, rocks, and logs. They have used hedges and ditches. In this new nation, men have built stone walls, split rail fences, stump fences, and bunker fences of logs. Now it is wire, woven, or single strand with electrical shock. In the northeast the old stone walls still serve the purpose for which they were built by pioneers.

It is pleasant on a sunny, warm day to walk the fence line and to make necessary repairs. But that is only one part. It is good to feel the warm breeze and to smell the heady fragrance of warm soil. It is good to listen to the exuberant robins, bluebirds and redwings. As one fixes a fence, he can take time to look across the fields and meadows to the blue-green mountains rising against the blue sky. As a man works around his boundaries,

SAFETY COUNCIL URGES SPECIAL CONSIDERATION FOR OLDER PEDESTRIANS

"The elderly pedestrian is particularly vulnerable in traffic," the Maine Highway Safety Committee says.

"The cautious motorist is ever watchful for the walker who is well along in years," continued the committee. "He realizes that failing eyesight and defective hearing are the natural companions of age and that it is more difficult for the aged pedestrian to judge accurately the speed of an approaching car."

"Another important factor to be considered is that elderly people, because of their fear of falling, are inclined, naturally, to watch very carefully where they are placing their feet. This caution often diverts their attention from the flow of traffic."

In a plea to protect these elderly walkers, the safety organization urged:

"Remember, the road belongs to them, too. As a matter of fact, the pedestrian was here long before the automobile appeared on the scene. Let's all make certain that we give these senior citizens more than an even break in traffic. Let's give them the respect and the extra consideration to which they are entitled."

"Be prepared, as you drive," the committee concluded, "to do everything possible to keep these elderly folks safe in traffic."

PROCLAMATION

Town of Bethel

WHEREAS, the basic premise that democracy rests on a belief in "laws rather than men"; and

WHEREAS, that a unified effort on the part of all citizens to reawaken the belief that justice, to be meaningful, must be identified through the processes of democratic law; and

WHEREAS, the Junior Bar Conference of the American Bar Association and the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce have joined hands through their local affiliated groups to support a unified effort on the part of all citizens for a national law day

NOW THEREFORE, I, Harold L. Bess, Town Manager of Bethel, do hereby proclaim May 1st as Law Day in Bethel.

MAN'S RECIPE

LUCRETIA'S LIME-TUNA

Some of my friends and neighbors say that as I accumulate years, I am gradually becoming more broadminded and tolerant. I hope you won't think I am changing my attitude toward fried tripe. I have honestly tried to eat the material, but I just cannot make a go of it.

I know that I have been a bit offish about gelatin concoctions, and perhaps I have been a whiffle stiff-backed. A gelatinous affair that wiggles, shivers, gyrates, shakes and shows nervous instability is a mistake. Such a mixture reminds me of the contemporary condition of the world.

A dish such as Lucretia's has commendable firmness and it goes well at a buffet along with a hot casserole. In fact, I like this lime flavored affair.

Use one package lime gelatin, three fourths cup boiling water, one half teaspoon salt, one and a fourth cups cold water, one tablespoon lemon juice, one third cup mayonnaise, one half cup fine-chopped celery, and one can tuna.

Dissolve the gelatin in the boiling water. When dissolved add the salt, cold water and lemon juice.

Set to cool. When slightly thickened, beat in the mayonnaise. Mix the celery and tuna together, and add to the gelatin mix. Pour into mold and chill.

Intending fence, he knows that he is also mending winter ravages in his heart.

AMONG THE HILLS OF DEAR OLD MAINE

Early Albany

By Eleanor K. Lovejoy

Albany is in the western part of Oxford County south of the Androscoggin River. Greenwood bounds it on the north-east, Mason and Stoneham on the southwest, and Bethel and Waterford on the northwest, and Waterford and Norway on the southeast. In size it is about 7 1/2 by 10 miles. The northern half of the western border is occupied by the Albany Mountains, of which the chief is Bear Mountain. The middle of the eastern side of the town is occupied by a group of seven or more mountains, including Lawrence, Long, Round, and others. Round is the highest, having an altitude of about 500 feet. At the northeastern corner is another lofty hill, and half way to the center of the town is another. Flint's Mountain stands in the center of the southern part of the town, flanked by two others in a line to the northeast. Somewhat to the west of the middle line of the town, running through its length from north to south, six hills succeed one another at equal distances. Birch Hill is the most southern while Square Rock stands about midway of the line. Through the broad valley south of this Crooked River sweeps westward, forming a semi-circle about the two southern hills West of Square Rock comes down a tributary to Crooked River, on which are the noted "Albany Basins." They are a series of deep cavities, formed by the eddy current of the water in the talconic rock forming the bed of the stream. One of these basins is said to be not less than 70 feet deep while it is only 40 in diameter.

Songo Pond having an area of about one square mile lies in the northern part of the town and forms the source of Crooked River. This stream takes a general southern course through the town and on to discharge its waters into Sebago Lake. Other ponds are, Farlong, at the southeastern corner, Hutchinson, a little to the west of Farlong, Chawp, near Chawp Hill, Little Papoose, near the western border, Broken Bridge and Crooked Ponds north of Square Rock, and several smaller ones.

After the Revolutionary War was over it was a question of paying the soldiers for their services. At that time Maine was part of Massachusetts and still very scarcely settled, although at the close of the French and Indian Wars in 1763 with the treaty of Paris, many had rushed to Maine. They still built near the coast and not too far inland. As time went on and there was no more great trouble with the Indians,

BROWN CO. SUBSIDIARY REPLACES SOUTH WOODS IN VENEER MANUFACTURE

A new cross-banding mill, which will provide 40 new jobs and also open a new market for New England hardwood logs, will be opened shortly at the North Stratford, N.H., veneer and plywood subsidiaries of Brown Company, northern New England pulp, paper and forest products manufacturers.

The newly constructed plant, now nearly ready to start operations, will use New England hardwoods to make some $2,000,000 worth of cross-banding which the North Stratford veneer plant has been purchasing annually from suppliers in the South, at the rate of about 30 carloads a month. Allie E. Salls, president of the North Stratford companies, said "extensive research has proven that the use of northern hardwood logs in making cross-banding, in place of lower grade southern wood, will result in a stronger and higher quality plywood."

Cross-banding, a Brown company spokesman explained, is the center portion of the plywood "sandwich." He added that "by cutting its own cross-banding at North Stratford, the plywood mill will create 40 new jobs at the start. It will also create a new market for New England hardwood logs which formerly had to be cut into pulpwood, not being up to the exacting standards for use in making veneer or lumber. Most of the logs used in the new cross-banding plant will come from Brown Co. woods operations, although some will be supplied by farmers and woodlot owners in New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine."

Brown's Company's announcement said erection and operation of the new cross-banding mill at Granite State Veneer, Inc., and Plywood

Products, Inc., two corporations acquired by Brown Company in 1955, "is in furtherance of the parent company's long-range program for greater diversification and maximum utilization of its forest reserves. Brown Company owns over 630,000 acres of timberland in New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont. It has pioneered in a forest-preservation program, designed to devote each tree to its most valuable use, thus getting maximum value from scientific cutting of timber on Brown Company lands."

The announcement added that the new cross-banding operation will also result in more work for woods contractors, loggers, and cutters, who will be needed to produce the additional logs required. Truck owners will also benefit, as most logs will be transported to North Stratford by highway.

In addition to the new cross-banding plant, which is 240' long and 50' wide, recent plant improvements made at North Stratford since Brown Company acquired control of the plants there, include installation of a large auxiliary boiler to handle increased demands for steam; building of a temperature and humidity-controlled warehouse for storage of veneer, and installation of mechanical equipment for pre-finishing and pre-sealing plywood.

At the present time the highly-integrated operations at North Stratford employ over 300 residents of New Hampshire and Vermont. The plants are a leading supplier of yellow birch and oak plywood, used extensively in the trailer industry for interior paneling, in homes and offices, and for door skins and counter fronts.

Snoos talk as if they had forgotten their own ancestors. —Herbert Agar for it seven years later.

Some of these early settlers went back to Andover, Mass., for one reason or another. Joseph Lovejoy was one of them who went back. He became ill and soon after died. The next spring his son John Lovejoy came to Albany to live and die there.

Deacon Asa Cummings settled on what was later the George Cummings place, and raised a fine family of 14 sons and daughters, followed by many honorable descendants, some of whom were prominent members of the clergy. Abner Abbott settled where his grandson, Frank, later lived on the hill.

The earliest "burying ground" was a family yard on the Stephen Cummings place, near the original clearing. A stone there bears the name "Jones," a young settler who died in 1797, aged 26 years. In 1800 there were 69 people living in Oxford Plantation. It was decided at the Plantation meeting on December 28, 1802, to petition the Massachusetts Government for incorporation as a town and to call the name Montgreen. The next spring they changed the name to Albany, and the town was incorporated June 20, 1803, by the General Court of Massachusetts.

Speaking of mills, there were several saw and grist mills built in the early years of Albany history. John Lovejoy's lot included what we know as the Wallace Cummings place. Just below the present building site on the brook once called "Sweet Brook," he built his first log cabin and a mill. Later on, he built a framed house where the present buildings are. These old mills were a crude structure of logs at first. The wheels were turned by water power and many a poem has been written about the "old water mill." The old up and down saws were capable of lots of work but hard to handle since it was necessary to have a good "head of water." Many times the sawing was done at night. There were still quite a few stray Indians roaming around at the time Albany was settled. Since they had become so mixed up with the French from Canada and the St. Francis tribes, no one could be sure of their friendliness. It seems that John had been threatened by a couple of these who were quite unfriendly. One night he was alone in the mill sawing by lantern light. A shadow passed across the log he was working on. He was a quick thinking man and stepped quickly behind the big post just as a bullet came by his head and buried itself in part of the frame of the mill. John grabbed the old iron bar he used to set the dogs with and ran outside before the Indian could reload and prime his gun. What happened John did

Read Acts 13:1-4

The Holy Spirit said "Set apart for me Barnabas and Saul for the work to which I have called them." (Acts 13:2, RSV.)

In Upper Egypt, Ayyad El Daleel is a devoted elder of a village church. As he was meditating and reading the word of God, he came to these words: "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" For him this was a personal call of the Holy Spirit to witness in a more devoted way for the Lord.

Since then, he spends three days of each week in his fields looking after his business. He spends the other four days each week visiting churches. He visits about forty churches every year, most of which have no pastors. He pays his own expenses and in many cases helps financially the churches he visits.

During the "Lord's four days" he visits the church members and others also. He sings, reads from the Bible, and prays in every home. In the evening he preaches in the church with all seats occupied. Through his witness, many souls have confessed their faith in Christ and joined the church.

PRAYER: O God, I know that Thou wouldst have me do something for Thee today. Help me to forget my desires in order to do Thy will. Help me to forget my comforts till I see others comforted in Thee. In Christ's name and for His sake. Amen.

not say, but it was said there was one Indian missing from the gang after that night and he was never bothered again. In later years this mill was burned and a clover mill was built on the brook farther down. Later a stream mill was built there.

A mill was built about the turn of the century at Fernald's mills and at Pattee mills in the northern part of the town. Nerleimah Niles built a mill in 1825 and sold it to Moses Pattee in 1830. Mr. Pattee operated this mill a half century. Several others owned it in later years. At one time there were several homes in that neighborhood.

OVER BACK-COUNTRY ROADS AT 45 WITH A SKY-HIGH LOAD OF TIMBER

Chevy middleweight shows the big rigs how it's done!

That's a 6303 medium-duty Chevrolet powered by a 293-cu.-in. V8. But there's sure nothing medium-duty about the load. Mr. J. E. Blankinship, Arkansas logging contractor, says both of his torsion-spring 6303's "move along at 40 to 50 miles per hour with 55,000 pounds gross weight and maintain a 5-trip-a-day schedule with no trouble at all." Figure the money you save when you've got a medium-duty truck that can cover 30,000 back-country miles a year with a high-tonnage load!

We've never seen anything like the amount of praise truck owners are heaping on Chevy's new torsion spring suspension. Owners like the fact the truck handles a whole lot easier, can move faster off the road without beating the driver to death and shaking loose all the sheet metal. They like the idea of extra thousands of miles before trade-in. . . . Drive a '60 Chevy just once. It's a whole new experience.

Chevy middleweight averages 200 miles of back roads a day logging timber out of the woods and delivering it to the mill at Gracet, Arkansas.

Dog license tags were designed expressly for dog collars, not the kitchen shelf or bureau drawer, S. F. Dorrance, assistant chief, Division of Animal Industry, Maine Department of Agriculture, warns dogs owners.
